GLANCE
I DIDN'T KNOW AMERICAN KIDS DON'T CLEAN CLASSROOMS AT SCHOOL!
WE CLEAN CLASSROOM AT NIPPONIAN GRADE SCHOOL
YUMI, WERE YOU A JANITOR BEFORE?

Showers — warning: you don't get to shower the first few days you're at boot camp (receiving phase.) During Phase I, the DIs will scream at you as you walk through the shower (30 seconds to a minute total if there's no time!), but by Phases II and III, they'll leave you alone. You will appreciate how clean you can get in a short 3-5 minute shower by the end of boot camp.

Hygiene check — female recruits feel like idiots, flailing your arms and legs as you turn around in circles, but it helps the DI check for any hidden bruises and injuries that the individual recruit can't see on their own. (Bon odori = Obon festival dance to honor the spirits of ancestors.)

Cleaning duties — Yumi shines in this area, because Nipponian school children are required to clean their classrooms after school. On the other hand, Amerigon kids are protected by the federal Child Labor Law, so hired janitors clean schools. But after all that cleaning in boot camp, all Marines become professional janitors in the fleet.
